GOAL Privacy Policy

Privacy Policy

What kinds of information is collected?

When you use the internet on a GOAL computer, the web server collects information from your web browser, including:

- browser type
- internet address
- operating system type

We also use cookies to help us analyze your browsing behavior so we can improve our service.

How this information is used?

Information that we automatically collect is for:

- improving GOAL’s training and consulting
- technical troubleshooting

Personal Information

We do not gather any person information on you while you are using the computer. You voluntarily provided your name, address, email, and phone number when you signed up for one of GOAL’s outstanding courses. You were provided with a username that already has your personal information connected to it.

Security

Here at GOAL, we will not provide your personal information or browsing history to anyone other than law enforcement with the proper warrants and documentation. Other than that no outside parties will have immediate access to it, nor will we willingly provide them with it. Unfortunately, due to the harsh environment of the internet we cannot guarantee that all information will be completely secure.

Illegal Activity

If we find that a user is partaking in any illegal activity while using a GOAL computer, the authorities will be contacted and the abuser will be prosecuted to the fullest extent.

Policy Changes
Due to the fast pace and ever evolving internet, our privacy policy is subject to change. Users will be made aware of this when they sign into a GOAL computer. A window containing the privacy policy will pop up and they will have the opportunity to read it then.
